1 It Takes Two by Bob Allen
Cabot Square
 Abstracted human figures stretch up, simultaneously pulling away, whilst also being completely structurally reliant on one another. Allen lends this seemingly ephemeral, and intimate, gesture permanence by casting it in bronze.

2 Get Real by Henry Gibbs
Fishermans Walk / Wren Landing
 A trisected mural depicts queer friendships, intimacies, and selfhood, privileging self-navigated narratives beyond 'coming out.' It insists on connection and love, inviting viewers to step back, where distance reshapes how we see.

3 Return to Embrace by Jon Buck
10 North Colonnade
 Jon Buck's sculpture appears to show a couple locked together, gazing into each other's eyes. Closer examination reveals a strange fusion of forms, their bodies so far intertwined as to have become a single organism.

4 Electro-Rainbow by Lothar Götz
Crossrail Place (Level -1)
 Celebrating queer love and identity, this installation takes inspiration from the Progress Pride Rainbow Flag. Lothar also sees the work akin to the floor of a disco or cub, echoing the importance of club culture in LGBTQ+ communities.

5 Tandem Lovers by Gillie and Marc
South Colonnade
 On a bicycle made for two, Rabbitwoman and Dogman travel the world together sharing their love.

6 Kiss by Nigel Hall
South Colonnade
 Represented by two geometric shapes, Kiss shows two entities naturally balancing each other out and yet a slight gap remains between them creating a simmering tension.

7 Together, Basking on the South Quay by Lydia Hamblet
Montgomery Street
 Bring a loved one and bask together in the glow of this vibrant 15-meter mural. Overlooking the South Quay, Hamblet's work is concerned with creating shared encounters within the public realm.

8 The Knot by Richard Hudson
Water Street
 A shiny, curved surface folds itself into a complex knot. This seductive, mirrored surface creates the perfect opportunity for a selfie with your loved one.

9 Standing Figures by Sean Henry
Park Drive
 Two figures standing opposing each other, are they here to meet each other, passing one another, strangers or friends? Looking at their gaze, you might decide for yourself.

10 Minotaur and Hare on Bench by Sophie Ryder
Harbour Quay Gardens
 This sculpture displays a minotaur and hare in a quiet embrace enjoying the view across the water. Here, Ryder treads the line between mythical and human love.
